

WaveSpin Review

Kevin Dahlke

There is a new wave of reels that have hit the market and they are storming the fishing scene. The name of this company is WaveSpin and these reels were designed by Doug Hannon "The Bass Professor". The concept of these reels is and will eliminate that pesky loop that forms after numbers of repeated casts.

We have been fortunate to being able to field test the 3000 series reel and so far have been very impressed up to this point. The 3000 series reel that we are using has the feel and construction that are superior and are rugged enough to endure the rigors of daily use on the water. With the 8 ball bearing system, the reeling motion is very smooth and with the anti reverse feature makes for a very good reel.

The design of the spool is the key to the elimination of those loops that form on the cast. On every reel that we fish with, after a certain number of casts the loop will form and we need to sit down and work it out and this takes away from our fishing time. We have been using the WaveSpin 3000 now for a while and have made a load of casts and to this date, there has not been one loop that has formed yet.

This is a big benefit to the angler that is either a tournament angler or an angler that is out there fun fishing on a limited time frame. If you can have a reel that doesn't form that pesky loop, this can and will increase your time with the bait in the water longer. Also by having this loop elimination there is no need to cut off yards of line that typically happens and this is a huge benefit as well.

The casting ability of this reel has been very good and we have been able to hit the targets that we are casting at on a consistent basis. With the no tangle design we weren't sure if this was going to affect our casting abilities but with the tests so far there haven't been any restrictions in our casting. Also with the design of the spool we are able to load more yardage of line onto the reel and this also increases casting distance.

A great feature that was built into the reels spool was that you are able to take apart the spool without any tools. What benefit this has to the angler is that by disassembling the spool, we are able to slide all of the old line off of the spool for line replacement. So instead of pulling the line off of the spool hand over hand, take the top spool part off of the spool and slide all of the line windings right off, assemble the spool top back and you are ready to load new line on. This is another time saver for the angler as every one of these minutes we are able to retrieve; this gives us more time for other fishing activities.

The construction of the body of the reel is designed to be light weight but rugged as well. The handle comes with a knob that looks oversized but in reality is very form fitting into your hand and easy to find if your eyes are else where. The drags system is built rugged and smooth just like the rest of the reel and since “Doug Hannon” had designed this there was no question about the drags capabilities. Lastly there is a lube port that makes it very easy for applying oil to the reel and this makes sure that the oil goes where it is suppose to.

For the hours that we have used this reel to this point we haven’t found one issue or complaint about it. With the exclusive 2 year unlimited warranty that comes with every WaveSpin reel, how can you go wrong with that. As we start approaching our open water season here again, we will continue using the WaveSpin reel and also will be getting more of them as well. This is the first reel that we have used that is loop free and to us that is a huge benefit. I don’t know how much time we have sat down to work out a loop in frustration, but never yet have we had to do that with our WaveSpin 3000.

If you are looking at purchasing a quality spinning reel this season, take a good look at the WaveSpin. These reels are priced in the same ballpark as other quality reels of this caliber and with the no tangle feature, how can you go wrong. “Catch the Wave” with the New WaveSpin System spinning reel, we have caught the wave, why not you.
